

LITERATURE AND MEDICINE

A SCHOLARLY JOURNAL
SPECIALIZING IN THE
MEDICAL HUMANITIES

Described as "Tonic for the soul" in American Medical News, LITERATURE AND MEDICINE is an annual publication created to explore the special connection between two important disciplines. Literature interprets the meaning of human life; medicine protects it. Both disciplines have a story to tell—a narrative, a clinical history. Both enhance life. And both are united in an unremitting paradox—the need to stand back from, yet share in, the struggle of life itself.

The theme of Volume 7 is "Literature and Bioethics." Available October 1988.
